Computer Science Major, B.S.

The bachelor of science with a major in computer science is the preferred degree both for graduate study in computer science and for technical careers in software development, computational science, networking, information systems, and electronic commerce. Graduates of the program are well-suited for professional employment in traditional computer and communications industries, as well as in such diverse industries as financial services and consulting practices in which computing and information management are central to the operation of the enterprise. Students who desire a more in-depth knowledge of computing have the option of receiving a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in as few as five years.

Core Requirements

- COMP 455 and 550
- MATH 547 or 577
-STOR 435
- Five additional three or more credit hour COMP courses numbered 426 or higher (excluding courses for honors thesis, internships, independent study, and COMP 690). Any single offering of COMP 590 may be counted toward this requirement without prior approval. The program also provides opportunities for students to learn and develop basic skills in the various areas of theatre practice. All General Education requirements apply.

Because the College of Arts and Sciences allows a total of 45 credit hours ( 15 three-hour courses) in a student's major to count toward graduation, as many as sixseven electives can be selected from the range of offerings in the department. Students may choose to concentrate on an area (or areas) of special interest within the major: acting, directing, voice, movement, technical production, design (scenic, costume, sound, and lighting), costume history, costume construction, dramatic literature and criticism, dramaturgy, stage management, theatre management, and playwriting.

Students majoring in dramatic art cannot pursue the minor in dramatic art.

- FourThree elective courses: Students may choose elective courses numbered between ENGL 200 and 699.-Students should view the courses_(which may include any of the courses listed among the core requirements).

Students have the option to group these electives within a concentrated area of study called a "pathway." Pathways are not required, but choosing (or creating) one can help focus studies (e.g., in order to prepare for graduate school or to develop an area of interest to pursue later as a profession). Students may create their own pathway or choose one of the following pre-selected pathways:

- Transnational literature
- Writing, editing, publishing
- Archives to digital humanities: 21 st century research methods
- English and education
- Gender and sexuality
- Music, the visual arts, and media studies
- Literature and social justice
- Literature, war, and empire
- Race and ethnicity studies
- Science, medicine, and literature
- Theory and philosophy
as an opportunity to further their work in historical periods or to explore other fields, methods, themes, and approaches to literature. The three courses can share a common ground organized, for example, around a theme; a historical period or periods; a genre; a critical approach; a national, regional, or ethnic grouping; or a writing focus or they can combine a range of different interests.
- Of the 10 courses required for the major, two of these must focus primarily on American literature: ENGL 343, 344, 345, 347, 348, 350, 356, 360, 367, 368, 369, 373, 443, 444, 445. Courses fulfilling the American literature requirement will also fulfill a core requirement or serve as an elective.

Courses marked with an asterisk may fit more than one category but can be counted only once ${ }_{-;}$ although courses that fulfill the American literature requirement simultaneously fulfill a core requirement or an elective requirement. For example, ENGL 347 may fulfill either the 16601900 or the post-1900 requirement, but not both, and it counts towards the American literature requirement in either case.

English majors may choose additional courses, though they should keep in mind that no more than 45 semester hours of English (excluding ENGL 100 and 105) may be used toward the B.A. graduation requirement.

Students must have a grade of C or better in at least 18 semester hours in courses numbered ENGL 120 and above to satisfy the major requirements. All General Education requirements apply.

Medicine, Literature, and Culture Minor

The interdisciplinary honors minor in medicine, literature, and culture was developed in collaboration with Honors Carolina and the Department of Social Medicine in the UNC School of Medicine. It encourages students to explore the cultural and historical dimensions of medical practice by viewing the practice of medicine not simply as an application of chemical and biological analyses of and interventions in the functioning of the human body but also as a cultural practice embedded in changing ideas of disease, health, doctors, patients, medical institutions, and ethics. The minor is available to students accepted into Honors Carolina and to any undergraduate student who has achieved and maintains a grade point average of 3.00 or better. Requirements for the minor include five courses representing at least three different subject codes. ENGL 268 H Medicine, Literature, and Culture is required and is considered one of the three subject codes. Options for additional courses include, but are not limited to, the following courses:
